

THE BROWN NOSER

"GOD BLESS THE NEWS."

VOLUME XII, ISSUE 5

APRIL 2018

WWW.THENOSER.COM

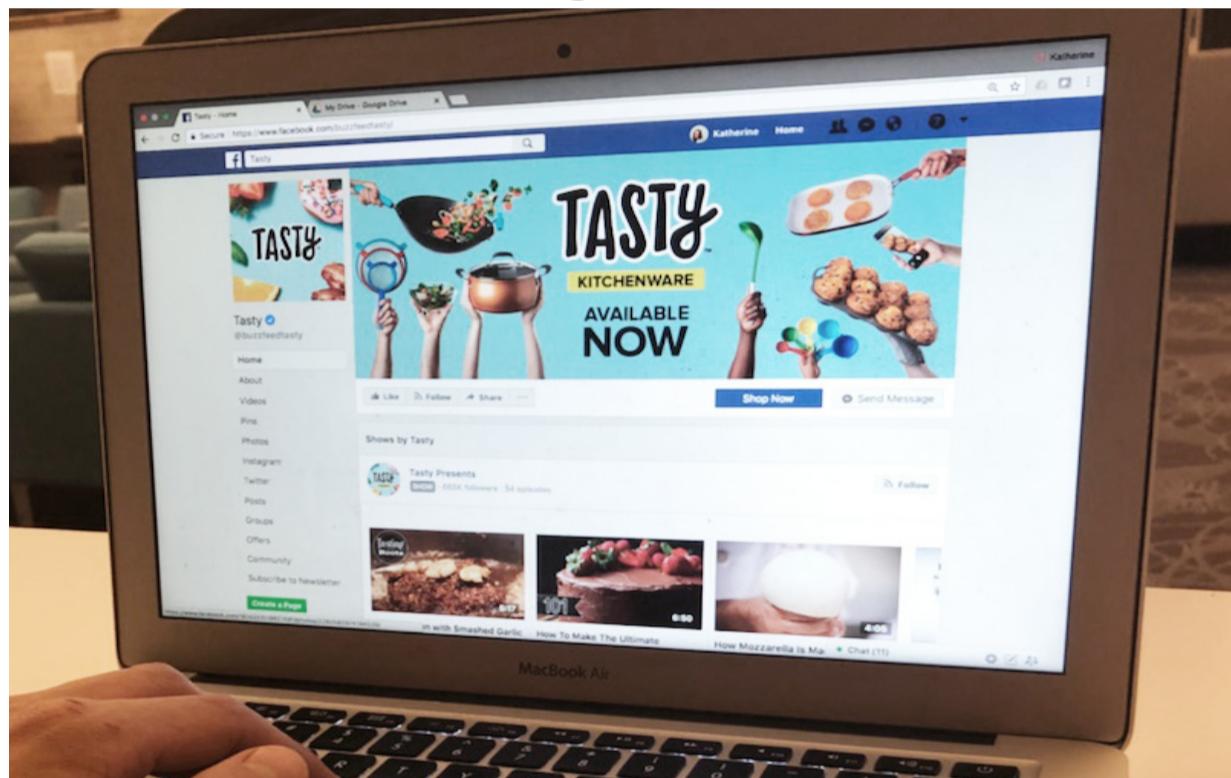

Model UN and Mock Trial Clash Over Who's Better at Pretending To Be Useful

>> CAMPUS LIFE C111

Neurosurgeon Saving Up Enough Brains To Make Mega-Brain

>> OFF CAMPUS X13

Senior Wistfully Recalls Four Years of Watching Tasty Videos During Lecture

Welcome to the last issue of the year. We hope.

BY FRANCIS BOGAN

Explaining that he feels nostalgic in his last month at Brown, Senior Michael Lamrick admitted that he is going to miss tuning out his professors and watching Tasty videos on Facebook during lectures.

"After Brown, I won't be able sit in these incredible classes and scroll through food videos on Facebook," said Lamrick. "I've been in some of the most interesting lectures I've ever heard when I've lost focus for a moment, opened Facebook, and happened to see some delicious looking recipe video. It's sad that that will be over in just a couple weeks."

Lamrick, a political science concentrator, says that some of his strongest memories of Brown are of watching videos on how to make special sandwiches, hamburgers, steaks, and pizzas in lectures. He credits the Open Curriculum with having allowed him to scroll through Facebook in classes from over ten departments.

Continued on Page A2

Terrifying Barista Keeps Writing "You Will Die Tonight" In Latte Foam

BY KATHERINE DUNHAM AND BEN HAYSLITT

Blue State customers report that a new terrifying barista has been writing "You Will Die Tonight" in foam on top of their lattes.

"When I look down at my latte and the barista has drawn a nice heart or leaf in the foam, it's a little treat," said customer Hannah Gates. "But the new barista wrote that I was going to die tonight and I felt a sudden chill all over my body. I couldn't shake it all day."

Sources report that the scary barista has been dispensing dark prophecies about customer's futures in all customer's latte foam.

"She wrote 'Beware The Wolf Man. He Will Ruin You' in mine," said customer Daniella Martinez. "I am scared."

According to Blue State patrons, other prophecies included "Run For Your Life!", "Don't Let The Night Fall," and "The Reaper Is Looking For You. He WILL Be Satisfied."

"Mine came true," said

Continued on Page A2

This barista drew a super realistic picture of my face in my latte foam. But then she drew little horns on it :)

REPORT: This Isn't The Brown Daily Herald, Don't Worry

>> CAMPUS LIFE Y555

I'm Sooooooo High Right Now

>> OPINION Z71

Clarinet Player Whirling Around Like Fucked Up Worm

>> OFF CAMPUS X13

Equestrian Coach Proudly Awards Varsity Sweater to Prized Horse

>> SPORTS B101

Jo's To Add Second Empty Ketchup Dispenser For Late-Night Rush

BY SENIORITIS

we will not refill after it runs out a few minutes later."

In response to increasing demand, Brown Dining Services director Martha Lorn announced that Jo's will add a second empty ketchup dispenser to help ease the late night rush.

"One empty container isn't enough to keep up with the hundreds of students who eat at Jo's on weekend nights," Lorn said. "To fix this, we're adding a second dispenser that will start with a little bit of ketchup in it, which

"This is awesome," said junior Alex Kennon, who regularly eats at Jo's. "Whenever I try to get ketchup I always have to wait behind a few kids who pump the lever for a moment before they tell me it's empty. This will cut those lines in half."

"This gives me a much better chance of getting a little bit of that ketchup splatter that comes out af-

Continued on Page A2

B.Y.O.K. = Bring Your Own Ketchup

The Brown NoserEditors-in-Chief

Francis Bogan
Katherine Dunham

Head Copy Editor

Francis Bogan

Senior Staff Writers

Duncan Gallagher
Ben Hayslett
Zach Horvitz
Prateek Joshi
Clare Maloney-McCrystle
Pablo Ortiz
Jamie Solomon

Staff Writers

Wylie De Groff
Brendan George
Will Gomberg
Kanika Gupta
Abby Johnson
Nathaniel Kublin
Jacob Lockwood
Justin Ly
Luke Perrotta
Brendan Pierce
Bianca Stelian
Charlie Stewart
Kate Talerico
Alex Vaughan Williams
Matthew Warshay

Photo Editor

Jack Butler

Photo Staff

Drew Dickerson
Kanika Gupta
Thea Monje
Meredith Morran
Laura Tamara Jaramillo
Warren Diggles, Photo-Boy

Webmaster

Jackson Owens

Printing by TCI Press

Interested in working for
The Brown Noser?

Email us at
thebrownnoser@gmail.com

Read the Noser online at thenoser.com

We're on Twitter, too:
@thebrownnoser99

“What a Steal!” Says Junior Who Just Bought Senior’s Lumpy Sex Couch

BY KATE TALERICO

Excited about the great bargain he had found on Brown University Buying and Selling, junior Marcus Schmidt reportedly told sources, “What a steal!” after purchasing senior Ann Rodriguez’s lumpy sex couch.

“How no one had snagged this yet really beats me,” reported Schmidt, already reclining upon the couch which all of its previous owners had had sex on. “Sure, it’s sagging in some areas and has a couple stains, but it’s super comfy. Wow what a find!”

“It’s really going to liven up my house next year,” Schmidt said of the couch, which the owners had to put a sheet on to cover wine and beer stains.

Friends of Schmidt told reporters that the couch had a mild but

You think this is a steal? I bought a shitty sex bed for only $20. It had been sexed upon, sure. But I'm not picky. Plus, you can just put some scratchy sex sheets over it.

gross smell to it. They added that the left cushions supports no weight, and people sink to the springs when they sit on it.

At press time, Schmidt was also in talks with Rodriguez to purchase her dented kitchen table, scratchy twin-bed comforter, and mugs she had gotten for free from various career fairs during her time at Brown.

Tasty...cont'd

“I remember being in the History of Capitalism, of my Freshman Fall classes,” Lamrick recalled suddenly, “We were learning about how the global economy organized after World War II, and I watched this incredible video on making mac and cheese with bacon and sour cream. I never cooked it or anything, but it looked so good. This is the sort of memory I’ll have forever.”

Barista...cont'd

Dylan Marshall, who had been handed a latte that read ‘Your Friends Will Not Escape The Woods.’ “My buddies went to their house by the lake a few days ago. They’ve been missing ever since.”

“I keep coming back,” said Sam Masterson. “She keeps writing ‘The Dark Prince Will Own Your Soul’ in mine. It creeps me out, but her lattes are the best.”

Ketchup...cont'd

ter you try for a minute,” Kennon added eagerly.

This exciting news comes right after Jo’s added more variety to the selection of bags of chips with weird holes in the bottom. It has also given life to rumors that Jo’s may even add a second water fountain so slow that it takes about three minutes to fill up a bottle.

Want to write for us?
We want you to write for us.

Email us at

thebrownnoser@gmail.com

and ask for an application.

Can't wait to see what you write!

Newly Elected UCS Excited To Enact Groundbreaking Legislation No One Outside of UCS Will Ever Hear About

BY GOV

The newly elected Undergraduate Council of Students is excited to push for important changes to the University that almost no students will pay attention to.

"This is apparently important, but I don't think any of us will pay attention," said junior Dara Lang, who feels that Brown could probably improve in a few ways, but does not feel motivated to become involved in the changes. "Though they seem excited about it, and that's probably what really matters."

Members of the incoming council are excited to push for change in University policy and campus life, very little of which will ever be recognized by their peers. Polls of student opinion show that while many students agree with these measures, they don't care enough to pay attention to their implementation.

"I'm not sure what UCS is," said sophomore Jack Ritter, who added that he thought he was voting for class board when he cast his votes for UCS. "Are they the people who plan Gala? They did a really good job with that."

"I guess I could start reading the Brown Daily Herald to learn about Everything at Brown is free now! You heard it here first. UCS has made it so. Thanks!

Love,
Sherri Twerp '21, Mandy Gobstop '11, Shane '19

UCS," Ritter added, "but I'm definitely not going to put myself through that."

In a statement released later, the newly elected

Undergraduate Finance clubs being defunded. Board expressed their excitement to make changes to Brown that students are afraid will lead to their

Automatic Flushing Toilet Needs To Calm The Hell Down

BY ZACHARY HORVITZ

A toilet in the men's bathroom of the Sciences Library needs to "calm the hell down," report distressed students. The toilet's easily excitable motion sensor, and raw, unbridled power caught several unsuspecting individuals completely off guard.

"I just flinched, and before I knew it the bowl exploded into a thunderous vortex, flinging droplets in every direction," Isaiah Brand '19 complained. "I left the stall completely shaken and a tad damp. That toilet just needs to simmer down a bit, yeah know? That was pretty unnecessary."

"That jumpy toilet really needs to chill out and bring its energy level, like, way down," said Brian Beck '18, another student startled by the temperamental toilet. "I had just barely stood up and the toilet, without hesitation, fired up. I tried to get out of the stall as quickly as possible, but the door opened inward, so I had to actually move back towards that turbulent pool of energy to escape. I mean, come on, that thing has gotta chill."

You calm the hell down, toilet. Just lay low for a while.

As of press time, students had reported that the automatic faucets in the sinks need to "put a little effort in."

Acapella Group's Beatboxer Spitting So Much

BY ABBA

tion of "Take Me Home Tonight." "Sometimes she covers her mouth with her hand but sometimes she doesn't, and then she's just spitting all over everything." At the end of the song, Monsori passed her mic to another member of the group who would soon begin spitting everywhere.

Baby!

Prospective Student Totally Getting Accepted After Writing Thank You Note To Tour Guide

BY WILL GOMBERG

Sixty-four hours after signing his name at the end of a heartfelt and lengthy letter to his tour guide, prospective student Anthony Atkins concluded he was totally getting into Brown as a result of his thank you note.

"It's pretty much a sure bet now," said Atkins, a high school junior from Boston, explaining how he tailored the thank you note directly to his tour guide. "I mentioned the open curriculum, our mutual love for computer science, and even a playful jab about the Red Sox beating the Yankees because she's from New York. She is definitely going to forward this email to the admissions office and I'll be set."

In his letter, Atkins, whose tour group had 34 other prospective students, emphasized his perceived connections to the tour guide.

"She must have a lot of sway with the admissions office since she's a tour guide," Atkins continued. "So I know she'll help me out. I made sure to remind her I was the one who asked about creating new clubs on campus, just so she can put a face with my name. Plus, she'll remember me because I shook her hand and asked her for lunch recommendations when the tour ended. I'm pretty much a shoe-in at this point."

At press time, Peters deleted the email without reading it.

Dear Mr. Tour Guide,
Your tour was the best college tour I've been on. Except for the one I went on at Tufts. Wow Tufts is amazing! So that's why I'll be enrolling there in the Fall. I just wanted to let you know. GO JUMBOS!

Student With Fjällräven Backpack Must Have Deep Appreciation for Swedish Culture

BY ABBY JOHNSON

Sources reported Thursday that a student spotted with a Fjällräven backpack must have a deep appreciation for Swedish culture.

"Fjällräven Kånkens are the epitome of Nordic style," Kody Brooks '19 remarked upon spotting the girl in Faunce. "You can tell right away that this girl is deeply immersed in Scandinavian culture. I mean, she is wearing Adidas right now, but, judging from that backpack, she probably rocks clogs all the time. Like ABBA, her favorite band, probably."

"Swedish people are the coolest," Brooks continued as the girl wrestled to fit her notebooks in the impossibly tiny bag, "and that girl's basically one of them. Look at that backpack. She definitely smokes cigarettes and has dope street style. Obviously she toned it down today, but most days she's got to be wearing a giant furry hat or a coat with five sleeves or something."

How do you pronounce Fjallraven? Tweet us at @thebrown-noser99!

Looking on while the sartorial mastermind pondered which slim side pocket to jam her water bottle into, Brooks noted that "she probably speaks Swedish. Everyone in Sweden speaks English, so she probably speaks both. So chill how they're all bilingual. And? One look at that bag, and you know this girl is super well-versed on the merits of universal health care. That's so sick."

As the girl stood to leave, adjusting the thin straps so they wouldn't dig into her shoulders, Brooks let out an envious sigh. "Probably headed to Ikea," he mused. "Man, she must run that place."

Brown To Welcome Class of 2022 With Pair of Gloves, Increased Tuition

BY JAMIE SOLOMON

Christina Paxson announced yesterday that Brown University was thrilled to welcome the incoming Class of 2022 with a pair of small, cotton gloves with the unrecognizable bear logo and a $10,000 increase in tuition.

"There's no better way to show how excited we are about the diverse, bright young minds entering our institution than to send them a pair of gloves that they could reasonably buy for $5 on Amazon and to charge them more for an already obscenely expensive education," explained Paxson, adding that she believes

Admissions has really taken into account what the Brown community truly wants and needs. "Tawdry gifts with vague symbolic value and exorbitant debt is what it means to be part of the Brown community."

"Who needs a sweatshirt or a 47 Brand hat?" reported an elated first-year after trying on the gloves. "These tiny little gloves are amazing and definitely representative of Brown's fiscal resources! It was super generous of them to splurge on the ones you can text with."

New Datamatch Site Only Matches You With Single Blognonian Staff

BY LOVE ME

The Blognonian released a second iteration of Brown Datamatch results yesterday morning, and according to several individuals who participated, it only matched people with the blog's staff.

"I was scrolling through and all of my matches were with Blognonian staffers," said junior Kerri Slane. "I think two were from the photo team, at least five of them were bloggers, and one was a managing editor. My match score with all of them was 100%."

Other students reported matching with different sets of the Blognonian staff. Most quickly received messages from staff members remarking on how "funny it is that they matched."

"I got a message from the editor-in-chief saying 'looks like we're 100% compatible lol,'" said sophomore Brian Willey, "Then I immediately got 7 more messages from other people. I checked all of their profiles, and they all said that they work for Blognonian."

"Pretty crazy coincidence," he added.

Later that day, the Brown Daily Herald was polling students asking if they would be up for a coffee date.

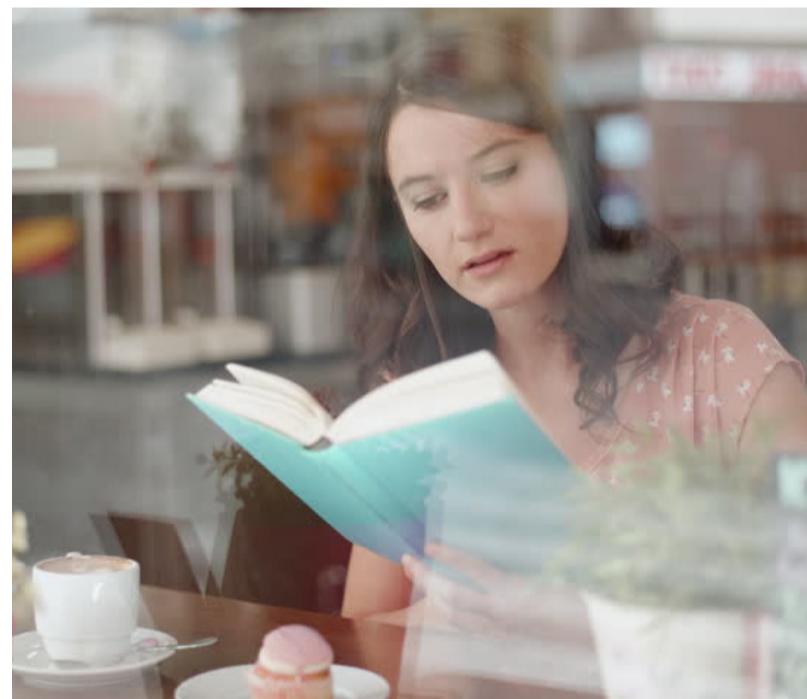

Woman in Window of Tealuxe Waiting for Someone to Notice How Hot She Looks

BY QT

After sitting in the window of Tealuxe longingly for the last several hours, area woman Nicole Lamb confirmed reports that she's been waiting for someone to notice how hot she looks.

"Tealuxe is the best place on Thayer to go if you're looking for a low-key place to get some work done where everyone passing by the windows can see how hot you look," said Lamb, adjusting her clear-frame glasses as she glanced out at the street to check if pedestrians had noticed her visible hotness.

"She hasn't flipped a single page in her reading of Marx," said barista Anthony Pyle, who recently refilled Lamb's English Breakfast for the 17th time that day. "But seems to be going to great lengths to make sure that the cover is visible to anyone walking by."

Sad that The Underground has no windows :(

"One person has approached me, but that was to ask if I was using the outlet next to me, not to compliment me on my physical attractiveness," said Lamb, who has sat in the exact same window for the last four days, thinking that the more time she spent there the more likely she would be to bring about her own

Hollywood-style "meet-cute."

As Tealuxe closed, sources say they saw Lamb headed to the Leung Gallery, where she hoped others might observe how hot she looked whilst "deep in meditative thought."

BUDS Supervisor Sports Towering Stack of Hats to Assert Dominance

Here's a little secret: none of the BUDS workers know how to make filet mignon. Not one.

BY BEST BUD

Veteran BUDS worker Jacob Olsen '19, fresh off a promotion to shift supervisor at Andrews Commons, has begun sporting a towering stack of hats to assert his dominance in the workplace. Sources spotted Olsen taking tiny, measured steps behind the pho counter on Wednesday afternoon in efforts to keep his colorful assortment of headwear from toppling to the ground.

"It's a great way to remind everyone that I'm in charge," Olsen explained, his neck an unwavering ninety degrees to the ground. "With ten different hats piled on my head, I can remind my workers that I'm just like them—but more important. You don't become a ten-hat worker like me without semesters of loyal commitment to BUDS. This red hat? It belonged to the super before me. I outlasted him. I outlasted them all. I'm on top now."

At press time, Olsen's posture was fantastic.

Overzealous Safe Walkers Driving Students Around In Armored Van

BY SECURITY

Explaining that the overeager pair picks up students in a large, bullet-proof vehicle formerly used by banks, sources confirmed that two safe walkers have been driving students around in an armored van. "I was walking down Brown Street from Pembroke to the Rock last night," said sophomore Nathaniel Wells, "When two students pulled up in an armored van and asked if I needed a safe walk. They put me in a special seat in the back that I had to buckle into. Weirdly, they still wore their yellow vests and, when I got in, they radioed to their supervisor that they were bringing one student to the Rock." Wells added that the students also had fun trivia prepared.

A Day on College Hill Revamped To Eight Miraculous Nights on College Hill

BY BRENDAN GEORGE

This week, the Bruin Club unveiled its latest plan to revamp A Day on College Hill (ADOCH) to Eight Miraculous Nights on College Hill (EMNOCH).

"EMNOCH is comprised of eight unforgettable nights, each designed to be the best of the students' life," remarked Beth Jenner, a coordinator of the program formerly-known-as ADOCH. "On the first night, for example, we will be hosting a pageant of famous alumni wearing Brown attire, hosted by Emma Watson and John Krasinski. Because we want this to be perfect, each student will be able to hang out with a famous alumni one-on-one and get their contact info."

"I think I'm most excited for Pedagogy Night," remarked prospective student Rebecca Velaj. "To celebrate the Open Curriculum and shopping period, there's a Shark Tank event where professors pitch their class to us and we get to choose if the class is allowed to be offered. This whole experience is so much more extravagant than what ADOCH used to be."

"Some aspects of ADOCH will remain," Beth Jenner clarified. "Like the ice cream social. But now ice cream socials will be offered every night. And the ice cream will be Ben&Jerry's not the generic kind. We're also putting them all in a special admitted students DATAMATCH, but one based on a comprehensive personality test, that way each of them has the strongest chance at finding the love of their life on day four of EMNOCH. They will be sent to an all expense paid dinner date at one of Providence's finest restaurants."

"Every night is enthralling, but the last will be the grand finale," Jenner explained while bedazzling 250 paper lanterns which will be laid out on the Main Green to spell 'CLASS OF 2022 WE WANT YOU.' "We are going to assemble the prospective students, then the lanterns are going to fly into the sky and form the words 'FREE TUITION FOR ALL OF YOU!' which is how we're telling them that they're going to get free tuition for all four years just for coming. Then each student will get a $10,000 gift card to the bookstore, and we're going to turn the Main Green into a party as large and as elegant as Campus Dance."

Jenner clarified that EMNOCH is only intended for regular-decision applicants, whereas students admitted through early-decision will instead have an invitation to Lunch and a Class In February On College Hill (LCIFOCH).

Here are the lyrics to the Brown alma mater for all of you graduating seniors:

Verse 1: I met you when I came to ADOCH, and now I have to gooooo. We fell in love in line at The Ratty and, oh, how I loved you sooooo.

Chorus: But neither of us ended up going to Brown. We went to different schoooooools. At least we still have Facebook. Unfortunately, we didn't get each other's names.

Verse 2: I remember you had brown hair. The color of the schoooooool. The color of the school I go to now is dark blue. Like meeeeee.

Chorus: Cuz neither of us ended up going to Brown. We went to different schoooooools. At least we still have Facebook. Unfortunately, we didn't get each other's names.

ADOCH Host Gives Visiting Student Authentic Taste of Campus Life By Sexiling Him

BY JACOB LOCKWOOD

While hundreds of admitted students explored campus through ADOCH events this month, one prospective student experienced an authentic glimpse of life at Brown when his ADOCH host sexiled him for the night.

"I was on my way back from a concert when my host texted me and asked me to stay clear of the room," recalled Michael Dimeno, an admitted student who was asked to leave with little explanation on his first night at Brown. "After hanging out in the hallway for an hour, I knocked to see if I could come back and he peeked his head out and asked if I could sleep somewhere else. It felt super real. I was so glad I got to see what Brown was really like."

Dimeno noted that

Lumpy sex couch! You know, the one from before?

there were plenty of ADOCH events to occupy him until 2:00 AM. "But once the ice cream socials and performances ended for the night, that's when I really experienced Brown," Dimeno said. "After I got kicked out, I went to the lounge to try to fall asleep, but two other students were having a loud conversation so I just laid on the couch for hours. I felt like I got an experience that no one else did."

Dimeno added that his authentic experience continued when he woke up the next morning and it was 45 degrees and raining.

BDH Poll Finds 90 Percent Of Students Don't Want To Be Bothered With Surveys

"Sorry I really don't have the time. I do have the answers."

BY ARMIE

According to the Brown Daily Herald's Spring 2018 Poll, the vast majority of undergraduate students don't want to fill out their survey. "Within a 3 percent margin of error, we found that 9 in 10 students we approached refused to take the poll," reported poll coordinator Brianne Davis '19. "Of those students who declined to be surveyed, 67.4 percent simply mumbled an incoherent refusal while avoiding eye contact and hurrying to walk away. Another 12.6 percent of poll respondents returned their survey sheets without even glancing at the questions on the back. There was also a statistically significant association between displaying signs of reluctance to take the poll and submitting a worthless survey sheet with a few incomprehensible markings on it." Among other results, the poll revealed that 39 percent of undergraduate students actively avoid J. Walter Wilson and Faunce for a couple days after they started seeing Herald pollsters positioned there.

Student Inadvertently Completes Ratty Challenge While Attempting To Find Open Table

BY GRILLED CHICKEN

Explaining that he had no idea how much time was passing as he searched for a table, sophomore Brian Patel inadvertently completed the Ratty challenge on Thursday.

"I knew that I'd been doing laps for a while but I didn't really start to think anything was out of the ordinary until it got dark outside," Patel reported.

Sources report that Patel arrived promptly at 7:30 a.m. for breakfast but didn't leave until he was kicked out by dining hall staff at 7:30 p.m., still wandering aimlessly through the dining hall with a plate of cold, twelve-hour-old pancakes in hand.

"There were a few tables with just one or two people at them but it would have been so awkward to ask to sit with them," said Patel. "Now that I think about it, there was also one completely empty table. But somebody had left a dirty plate there so there was no way I was gonna sit there. I had fooled myself into thinking that i'd find a better table if I just did another lap."

"It's pretty normal for students to walk in one or two circles when looking for an open table," explained one employee who was working the omelet station and saw Patel inadvertently complete the Ratty challenge. "But I started to wonder what was going on when Brian walked by me for the tenth or fifteenth time. He just kept walking in circles, looking more and more distressed with each passing. He was still going when my shift ended eight hours later."

At press time, Patel was seen asking for a box.

Listserv Email Somber Reminder Of Past Innocence, Openness To New Experience

BY SIR SERV

Junior James Wright reports that an email that had appeared in his inbox early this morning with the subject line "Brown Aerial Arts Revised Schedule" was a poignant reminder of the openness and energizing curiosity that flowed through the early weeks of his freshman year.

Wright noted that he had barely noticed the email, which had materialized among the daily selection of Today at Brown, Honor Society, Expedia, and LinkedIn messages.

"When I noticed it," Wright explained, "I was reminded of the freshman me, anxious but excited, at the activities fair in the OMAC. I remember the chaos, the hustle and bustle, but more than anything else, an energy that emanated from within. I was very aware that I was in college and a world of opportunities and new experiences lay before me. Back then, as I innocently walked among the rows of booths, I felt I could find my passions, or even, my calling. Wow, what a different time!"

There's a thumb in this picture! The first person to find it and tweet @thebrownnoser99 will win the computer in the picture.

Wright continued that, all those years ago, when he saw the Brown Aerial poster board, and was greeted with a welcoming smile by a student at the accompanying booth, he had confidently written his email in the Excel spreadsheet opened on a laptop nearby. "I felt like I could do anything!" he reminisced.

"After seeing that email this afternoon," he continued. "I thought, hey, you know what? That old me, that curious explorer, is still here somewhere. Maybe this time I should shake it up, go out of my comfort zone and actually check this out? I may really enjoy it!"

After the fleeting moment had passed, Wright finally opened the email, only to reply "Please take me off this. Thank you."

Student Compensating For Absolute Shithole Of A Room With Tiny Potted Cactus Spiky!

BY THE PLANT MAN

Claiming he wants to make his room feel more welcoming, junior Craig Rollins bought a tiny potted cactus for his absolute shithole of a room.

"It's nice to have something beautiful and alive in my room," said Rollins, completely ignoring the fact that the rest of his room is covered in piles of unfolded clothes and dirty dishes.

"It's also nice to have something to care for," he continued, surrounded by old containers of take out food and loose papers.

"I'm responsible for this living thing, and I don't take that responsibility lightly," said Rollins, who only has to water the cactus once every two weeks and usually forgets to do it.

At press time, Rollins was buying a goldfish.

Clumsy Freshman Gets Locked Out Of Campus

Oh well...

BY PABLO ORTIZ

Telling sources he 'could've sworn he had his key,' freshman Keaton Jefferson has reportedly gotten locked out of the Brown University campus. "This sucks even more because my laptop and notes are all in there," says Jefferson, seen idly leaning against a stone wall outside one of several entrances to Brown's 140 acre campus. "I yelled to see if anyone would let me in, but I guess everyone is off campus right now. I've thought of calling DPS, but I'd hate to inconvenience them. I bet this happens to a lot of people. It was just a matter of time before I'd get locked out, I guess." At press time, Jefferson got tired of standing against the wall, and slid to a seated position on the College Hill sidewalk.

Critical Review Staffer Really Adding Artistic Flare To APMA 1740 Review

BY JK ROOLING

Sources report that some critical review staffer definitely took serious creative license in their review of APMA 1740: Recent Applications Of Probability and Statistics.

"I think the review began with a Kante quote," reported an astonished Laura O'Neill, who added that the course description was chalk full of fanciful prose. "I was just looking to learn about the course difficulty, but the review took me on an epic journey through the structure of the class."

"The moniker of "professor" fails to do Harrison justice," the review described.

"He is an ever patient and responsive navigator, piloting the class through the stormy seas of the statistical. Confidently at the helm, Harrison guides his pupils through the myriad and mysterious applications of modern statistical methods. However, just as Harrison proves himself to his students, they, in turn, must prove themselves to him."

O'Neill reports that the homeric review placed an emphasis on student engagement.

"Success in the course does not materialize from an arbitrary void," said the review, "But rather is wrought through effort, exertion, and, moreover dedication to the journey. On each of the 10 homework assignments, students must wrestle with critical course concepts in the muddy pools delimited by the boundaries of their imagination and understanding. They will inevitably emerge forever changed, and stronger than before."

"Storm hardened," it continued. "The class must face the a culminating set of trials: three take home exams and one final exam. Grades are hard won, but deserved."

"I was mesmerized by the poetry of the review," O'Neill reported. "But, honestly, I was sorta put off by the 10 hours of coursework a week so I'm going to take 'Cooking Writing' instead."

CLACS 1925 - Exploration Of The Year 1925

VISA 6 - Just Crayons

ARCH 1111 - Dinosaur Bones

BEO 1 - You Have Ten Dollars, Don't Lose It

ENGN 3456 - Simple Machines

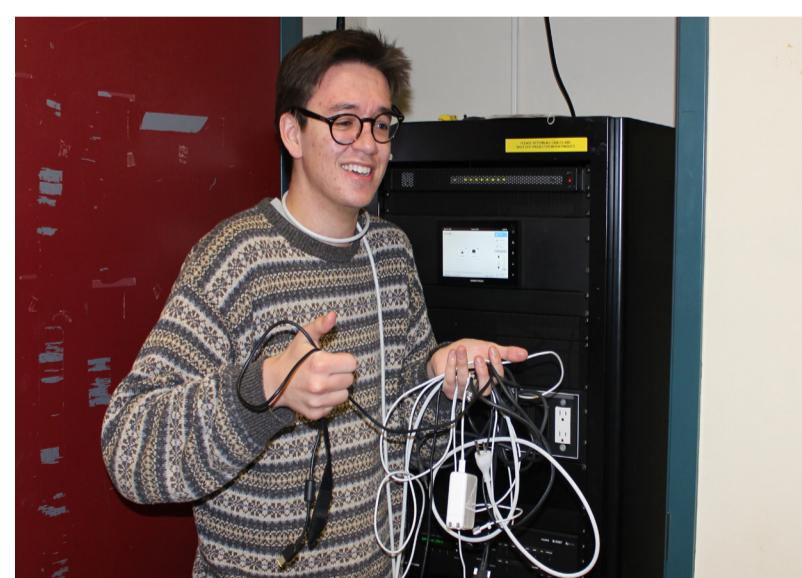

APMA 6 - Shapes

MUSC 9009 - Hot Crossed Buns

"Does Anyone Know How To Work This?" Desperately Asks Professor Holding Huge Mass Of Tangled Cords

BY IT

Holding up the huge mass of tangled cords attached to the podium at the front of the classroom, Professor Jessie Hall frantically addressed his class asking if any of them knew how to work the projector system. "You're all young, one of you has to know how I plug my computer into this," said Hall, pecking haphazardly at the multimedia panel mounted on the wall near the chalkboard. "I don't think any of these plugs are even the right shape for my computer. Does anyone know how to use Airplay?" At press time,

I can make filet mignon!

Professor Hall was asking the class if anyone knew how to get the video links in his Powerpoint to play.

Student Complaining About Being Broke Must Not See the LaCroix In Her Hand

BY ELEGANT LADY

Sources report that junior Margie Hough expressed genuine distress over how broke she was even though she was very visibly holding a pample-mouse LaCroix that cost way too much for some bubbly water with half-faded flavor.

Seen longingly gazing at the people swinging in the windows of By Chloe, Hough felt her pre-allowance checking account balance weigh heavily on her. "I just," she said between long sips of her LaCroix, "Feel that the expectations of wealth on this campus are unreasonable. Ugh, I'm so broke."

"What people pay for these days honestly makes me so mad!" said Hough, totally ignoring the overpriced sparkling water she was sipping from to soothe her throat. "Look at those oilless, air-crusted fries people are eating in there. That food isn't any better than regular food; it just has good branding that's used to inflate the price higher than a broke college student like me could afford."

At press time, Hough was Ubering to Whole Foods in order to pick up another carton of lime LaCroix, explaining to the driver how broke she was.

Slight Feelings of Attraction Towards Other Man No Match For Internalized Homophobia

BY BOGATRON

Explaining that he quickly denied his feelings and tried to think about other things, sources report that the slight feelings of attraction junior Jake Evett felt for another man were no match for years of internalized homophobia.

"That's not right," said Evett, who grew up in a socially conservative household, as he began to feel a desire to be physically close to another male student. Scared that he was feeling something stronger than platonic admiration for another man, sources report that Evett shook his head and tried to get back to work.

"I should be doing homework," Evett, who always attended schools with a culture of 'don't ask, don't tell,' said to himself later, after he caught himself envisioning Calen sitting beside him on his apartment's couch. "I need to start my American Presidency essay."

He's cute.

"Or at least my readings," blurted out Evett, who is openly accepting of homosexuality but can only accept himself as straight, after realizing he was imagining Calen lounging on his bed studying with him. Sources close to Evett speculated that his exposure to negative representations of homosexuality throughout his upbringing has instilled an unconscious homophobia that would never allow him to act on his feelings, at least without intense feelings of guilt and shame.

When reached for comment, Evett blushed and said he didn't have any.

Guy Who Named WiFi "FBI Surveillance Van" Real Comedic Genius

BY THE CIA

Neighbors report that an area man who named his WiFi network "FBI Surveillance Van" is absolutely freaking hysterical. The guy had been fooling the neighborhood and eliciting guffaws left and right since he set had up his network earlier in the week.

One neighbor, Jerry Smith, explained that, after seeing the name, he concluded that a cohort of FBI agents, ready to strike, must be conducting surveillance nearby.

"Ya know, I spent a lot of time looking around for a black van filled with high-tech bureau equipment," Smith exclaimed while struggling to hold back laughter. "When I realized it was a joke, I was in hysterics. What an original, funny idea. I need to meet the master comedian behind it!"

This guy again. He's everywhere!

shop also reported seeing the tongue-in-cheek signal.

"I was trying to get online when I saw FBI Surveillance Van on the list of networks," a customer reported. "That day, I was really stressed out, but seeing such comedy gold completely brightened my mood. The joke is just such a perfectly concocted mixture of the relatable and the absurd. It's light years ahead of anything else I've ever seen. That guy should drop whatever he is doing and go work the New York comedy circuit!"

The man's housemate reported that it was an absolute joy to live with the guy, who regularly cracks jokes that are at times edgy, but always hit the mark. He gushed, "The dude is always up to the funniest antics. You have to hear his voice-mail!"

Lazy Serial Killer Doesn't Even Have Cool Pattern

BY BOOOORING

ing card or twisted signature connected to any of the murders, police determined that the killer is lazy.

"I mean come on, you think he would have come up with something!" said Phillips. "Like maybe he could have been killing people who work at fast food restaurants because they are poisoning the community, or killing people that remind him of a childhood tormentor. Either of those would be the mark of a hard-working mind."

At press time, detectives were struggling to come up with a catchy name for the killer.

New Niche Restaurant on Thayer Street Only Serves Corn

BY CHLOE

"This is exactly what Thayer needed," said sophomore Josh Rannells between big bites of corn. "It's a great spot for lunch or dinner, the vibe is great, and it's a nice change from on-campus food."

At press time, the restaurant was somehow full all the time.

Following in the footsteps of other restaurants like Pokeworld and UMelt, a new food-specific restaurant has opened on Thayer Street that only serves corn.

"We saw there was a very small but specific need for corn on Thayer Street," reported the restaurant's owner Neil Hall, "And we wanted to fill that niche. We serve corn on the cob, corn that's been cut off the cob, creamed corn, popcorn, corn from a can, and those little corns that go in salad. And that's it."

Guy Actually Paying Attention During Aircraft Safety Presentation Must Be A Total Freakin Nerd

BY PRATEEK JOSHI

Sources report that airplane passenger John Sanders, who is actually paying attention during the aircraft safety presentation, must be a total freakin nerd. Those sitting nearby say that, as soon as the flight attendant began talking about emergency procedures, Sanders took out his earphones and started listened attentively.

"We all know what's in those presentations," explained fellow passenger Leslie Flynn. "Air masks, help yourself before your baby, blah blah blah. But this dork was actually listening. I could tell because he kept nodding his head and saying things like 'Got it.'"

According to the flight attendants, Sanders was even reading over the safety pamphlet in detail.

"Nobody actually listens to the presentation," said flight attendant Nina Vaid, "But this guy was all ears and even asked a clarifying question. I've been a flight attendant for 20 years and no one has done that. What a kiss ass."

At press time, Sanders started taking notes.

FOLLOW US ONLINE
FOLLOW US ONLINE
FOLLOW US ONLINE
FOLLOW US ONLINE

thenoser.com

Facebook: The Brown Noser

Twitter: @thebrownnoser99

FOLLOW US ONLINE
FOLLOW US ONLINE
FOLLOW US ONLINE
FOLLOW US ONLINE

Netflix Steps Up '80s Nostalgia Campaign By Trafficking Thousands Of Arms To Nicaraguan Contra Fighters

BY CHARLIE STEWART

Television streaming giant Netflix has announced plans to step up its '80s nostalgia campaign by illegally trafficking thousands of arms to Nicaraguan contra fighters.

"We want to take this '80s craze one step further after the success of 'Stranger Things' and 'Black Mirror's' San Junipero episode," announced CEO Reed Hastings in a press release yesterday afternoon. "That's why Netflix will celebrate the launch of Stranger Things season three by flooding Central America with millions of dollars-worth of US-made weaponry. We're bringing our viewers back to the 80's they know and love. Fun clothes, crazy hair, bloodshed in foreign countries without the guilt of an American-led war, and great music."

The marketing campaign has had mixed-reception among viewers. "I love reliving the '80s. Back then we didn't have to worry about the future," said Jeremy Brown, born in 1976. "We could just play Dragon's Lair and watch the Thriller video and sell weapons to Iran in the hopes of covertly funding right-wing guerilla fighters."

Competitors have been quick to respond. In a tweet this afternoon Jeff Bezos announced Amazon's plan to lobby the Department of Justice to increase the war on drugs, while Hulu attracted international criticism for its overnight invasion of Grenada.

God Relieved No One Has Noticed Extra Planet He Created While Blackout Drunk

BY WYLIE DE GROFF

After a wild night He can't remember, God was reportedly relieved no one has noticed the planet He created while absolutely hammered.

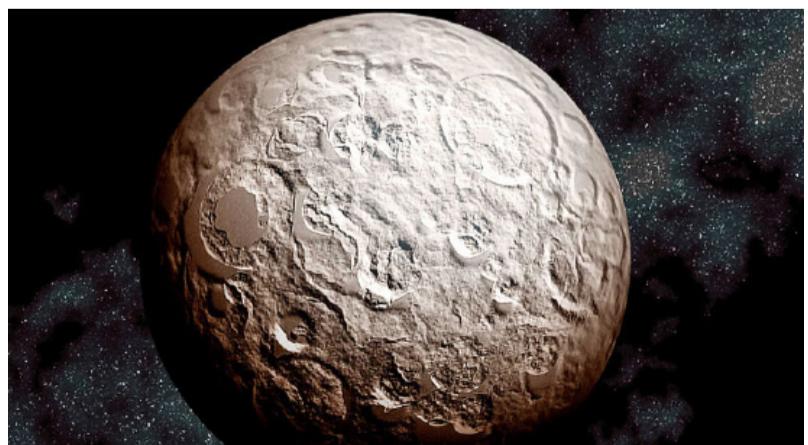

"I can't believe I just let it exist like that," God said while holding a bottle of Pedialyte. "I'm gonna be in deep shit if someone finds out about this."

According to God, the planet is positioned squarely in the center of the Asteroid Belt and is just a large, misshapen clump of rock and ice debris. The Supreme Creator of the Universe claimed that an incident like this is unusual.

"I've woken up and noticed that I made a bunch of weird animals the night before," God said as He took a handful of Advil, "But I can usually just put them on Madagascar or at the bottom of the ocean and totally forget about it. This is different. I'm lucky that no random scientist has spotted it."

At press time, God planned to "throw the thing into the Sun."

This planet is called :/

'Avengers: Infinity War' Just Two Hour Long Slideshow Of All Characters That Have Ever Appeared In Marvel Universe

BY SPIDERS

During a press conference last Tuesday, 'Avengers: Infinity War' directors Joe and Anthony Russo announced that the film would just be a two-hour-long slideshow of all the characters that have ever appeared in the Marvel Universe.

"We know how much audiences love seeing these characters together so we wanted to create a movie that featured every single character in the Marvel Universe," said Joe Russo. "With so many franchises, that's a pretty ambitious goal. But we were able to achieve it! All we had to do was not waste any screen time on plot, character development, or dialogue, and just make a slideshow of all the characters."

Anthony went on to explain the movie further, saying that the Powerpoint would feature high-definition pictures of the characters in costume and that the characters will appear in the slideshow alphabetically for efficiency.

"And it will all be set to an amazing score by famed composer Alan Silvestri," Anthony continued.

"By formatting the movie this way," Joe explained, "we don't need to use screen time to explain why characters like Groot, T'Challa, and Pepper Potts would all be together. Instead, we can just fit in as many characters as possible. And because this Powerpoint will provide fans with the huge payoff of getting to see every single one of their favorite Marvel characters together, we expect it to break all existing box office records."

The Russos ended the press conference by announcing that the scene that usually plays during the credits of Marvel movies will be replaced by a slide featuring a drone shot of all the characters together in a big open field.

"You can't see anyone close up because the drone had to fly so far away to fit everyone in," they admitted. "But what's important is just knowing that they're all there together."

Limo Keeps Getting Longer and Longer

BY TOOT TOOT

Report: Oh My God Your Crush Is Right There

I once had a crush. I met my crush in an internet chatroom for fans of the show Deadliest Catch. But my crush didn't have a crush on me. Now there's the catch.

BY CUPID

went on to report that you should totally go talk to her because, like, what can you lose?

Looking at something over your shoulder and gasping, sources reported that, oh damn, your crush is right there. "Oh my god I think she's looking over here," sources continued, quickly looking back at you so your crush wouldn't notice them staring. "I'm positive she was looking over here. You look good, don't worry." The sources

Local Man Absolutely Got A Little Bit Of Wrapper In That Bite, Yep

BY NO WAY

Local man Doug Baldwin reported this afternoon that he definitely got a little bit of wrapper in that bite, yep. Sinking his teeth into a pretty sizable turkey club, Baldwin for sure caught a little of the foil wrapping. He was going for the crust of the sandwich but just, ya know, accidentally got some wrapper in there too. It's a shame that he caught a little of the foil but hey, it happens. At press time, Baldwin just chewed and swallowed the whole bite — wrapper included — 'cause why not, right?

I like how wrappers taste. Papery and plasticy and not like food.

Johnny Depp's New Perfume Just Something He Calls "Scarf Smell"

BY WEIRD

Okay so we heard that Johnny Depp's new perfume is just something he calls "Scarf Smell"...? The new perfume will be available at Macy's... we think. But like who would want to buy that?

"Yeah um it's a fragrance I'm calling Scarf Smell," said Johnny Depp, expecting us to know what that meant. "It is exactly what it sounds like."

Alright...

Bare with us because we're trying to figure this out too. We have the same information you do: 1) Depp's signature fragrance is in partnership with Dior and 2) it's just something he's calling Scarf Smell. What is that? That's where we run up against some real confusion.

"I wanted to represent myself in the most authentic way possible. So I made Scarf Smell," said Depp before we gave him a blank look. "It's the smell of scarves. I don't know how else to explain it."

Okay?

Ummmmm okay????

Area Woman Still Weirdly Into John Green Novels

BY OKAY?

Revealing that Looking for Alaska had provided the inspiration for her manic pixie dream girl personality traits, area woman Sarah Byers admitted Wednesday that she is still weirdly into John Green novels.

"I would say these books were my middle school sexual awakening," Byers told reporters Wednesday in anticipation of the author's next predictable novel, which will feature a woman that beckons a quirky but straight-laced teenager into a midnight adventure that will leave him forever changed.

"They're really well-written novels," Byers continued, looking past the fact that the female characters never really develop until they meet a sarcastic young man with a crooked smile who wants to save them.

"It's kind of weird she's still into those YA books," said one friend who had stopped reading Green's novels after his 2012 bestseller-turned-blockbuster The Fault in Our Stars depressed the hell out of everyone. "They're fine books for high schoolers to like but she should've moved on by now. At least to Nicholas Sparks."

"I tried to explain to her that the books are pretty bad," continued her friend. "I mean the characters don't even act like teenagers. They're more like first-year students in an Ivy League MFA program. And names like Margo Roth Speigelman and Augustus Waters are truly unrealistic names. I don't get what she sees in them."

At press time, Byers was weirdly fine with the fact that she continues to read books by a 40-year-old man who writes about sex scenes between teenagers.

Area Woman Finally Reads Article She Opened In New Tab Last February

BY TALL R. IKO

Having finally read in its entirety the article her friends had been talking about for ages, area woman Christina Tan congratulated herself for closing a tab she had opened last February. "I started to feel so guilty seeing the unclosed tab every time I opened Netflix that eventually I started a whole new window just for TV-watching," said Tan, who hadn't closed any tab or application on her computer in a full 16 months. "My computer crashed one day and I thought it had closed all my tabs — but thank God for restoring previous sessions, otherwise that article would've been gone for good." Sources said that

Mad Lib CEO Announces (VERB) of Company's Latest (NOUN)

BY JOHN GREEN

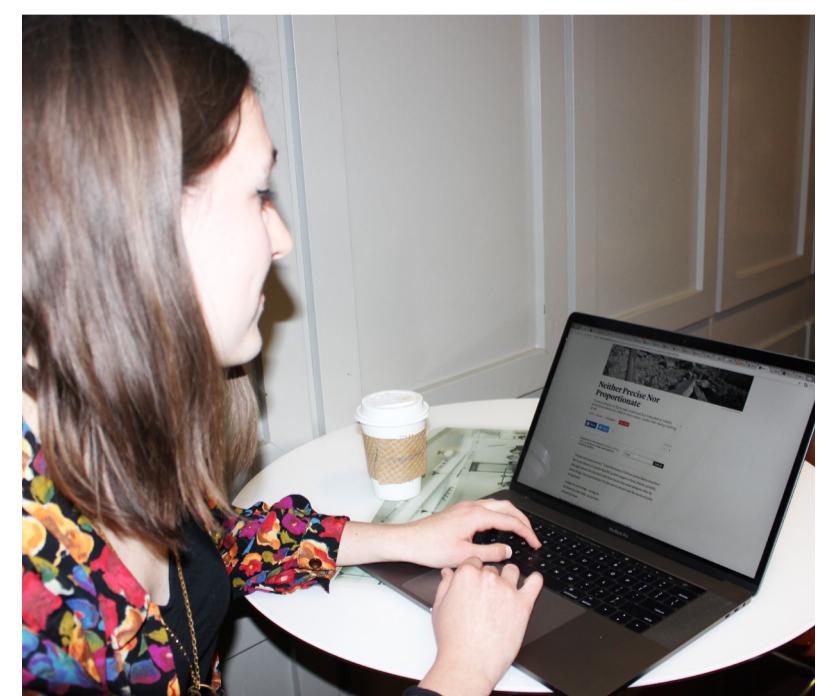

with our (NOUN)."

Dohle went on to (ADVERB) thank everyone who had worked on the (NOUN). "We want to thank you all from the bottom of our (PART OF THE BODY)," said Dohle. "I especially want to thank (NAME OF PERSON IN ROOM) for their (NOUN). We (VERB) it so much."

At press time, Dohle was previewing the company's work in BUTTS.

This is a picture of my family. We have the same eyes.

The article was about fishing. How to do it. Where to do it. What a fish is.

soon after, Tan rediscovered an old window with 23 tabs open to various sources used for an essay she had completed back in freshman year.

Archeologists Report That Wine Jugs And Grain Sold At Ancient Roman Coliseum Were Way Overpriced

BY CAESAR

According to a press release put out by the group on Tuesday, a team of archaeologists found that wine jugs, grain, and other food and drinks were extremely overpriced in the Roman Colosseum and other public game venues at the time.

"You could get a wine jug at a street vendor for one, maybe two denari," said lead archaeologist Vincetti Corredi, "But the amphitheater vendors would charge you 5 or 6 for the same quality wine. It was an absolute rip off."

Corredi explained that the team discovered signs underground near the Colosseum that advertised cheap snacks for unfairly high prices. His team realized how much of a rip off it was after comparing the Colosseum prices with the prices of local shops, preserved in stone tablets.

Get your hot dogs here! One million dollars!

"And of course they didn't allow outside food or drinks into the amphitheater," Corredi added, explaining that since tickets did not allow for reentry, spectators were not able to leave, get food, and come back. Letters and other literary records indicate that spectators frequently planned to eat or drink before and tough it out inside, but they usually caved and bought themselves wine or bread.

"We've found the remains of some snacks that Romans tucked into their clothes and snuck by in the Circus Maximus," Corredi added. "But it seems like the people were mostly caught and forced to throw their food out before coming in."

REPORT: Otters Some Nasty Little Creatures

BY LUKE PERROTTA

A new report released by Aquatic Mammals Digest confirms that otters are some nasty little creatures.

According to the report, researchers have discovered that many different species of otter, including the European otter, the North American river otter, the sea otter, and the giant otter, are freaky little munchkins.

"We had previously thought that otters were just intelligent, versatile animals that were exceptionally well-adapted to their environment," explained otter expert and lead author Denny Rollins. "But it turns out they're also slippery as hell. See them rolling around in the water like that? Damn, they're nasty as hell."

The Aquatic Mammals Digest report went on to classify otters as social animals who are down for absolutely anything under the sun.

"Our data showed that nine out of ten otters get up to all kinds of mischief," Rollins continued.

"And that tenth otter was bizarre in its own freaky kind of way."

At press time, otters were observed rubbing their greasy little mittens on everything.

Underfunded NASA Sends Used 2005 Corolla Into Space In Response to Latest SpaceX Launch

HONK HONK

BY ELON + KIMBAL

Following Space X's launch of Elon Musk's Tesla Roadster into space, NASA announced that they will send a used 2005 Toyota Corolla into space to compete for publicity.

"We're ecstatic to announce that NASA will be launching a used Corolla into space by the end of the month," announced NASA's administrator Robert Lightfoot. "Space X has gotten a ton of attention for their Tesla stunt, and this will get our name back out there. But, you know, we don't have the resources SpaceX has anymore."

Lightfoot explained that one of their former astronauts donated the car after their elderly parents' stopped driving.

"The car had too many miles on it to be resold, so he gave it to us," Lightfoot continued.

NASA engineers reported that a used crash test dummy will sit in the driver's seat while the Corolla is in orbit. They went on to say that, because the radio's speaker is broken, NASA will be putting a portable speaker in the car to play music.

"The Corolla only has a tape deck anyways so the speakers aren't even the major holdup," explained Lightfoot. "But I found an awesome portable radio in my garage so we're just going to put that in the center console instead. It's perfect for our budget constraints and I'm sure it'll do the trick."

"We also had to get creative with the seats," he continued. "They're not leather but we wanted to make them look nice so we got some fancy pleather seat covers for them. We're confident that, once we scrape off the bumper stickers from the back and paint over some of the dings on the fender, the launch is going to be just like SpaceX's if not better."

To raise money for the flight, NASA engineers are hosting a car wash in the Kennedy Space Center's parking lot.

Tony You Knucklehead! You've Ruined the Gabagool!

BY CARLO

Damn it Tony you knucklehead! What the hell do you think you're doing? You've ruined the gabagool!

You gotta be kidding me. The boss is gonna be so mad. His Nonna walked three miles to the Deli to get that gabagool for cousin Vinny's birthday! Nice going you greasy-fingered jamook!

Ah geez Tony, don't try to fix it yourself! Do you have any idea what even goes into a gabagool you schnook? Flour? What are you gonna do with flour? I'm talkin' here! You goon, you've gone and got flour all over the braciole! What have you got muzzadell for brains?

This is the last time Tony. I ain't helping you out of this one. Whaddaya mean you don't want my help? We've known each other since we were kids and now you don't want me to help you make a gabagool for cousin Vinny's birthday? You insult me!

The boss will be back any minute now. You're in for it now Tony. Wait, Paulie the Rat's ma makes a mean gabagool, he'll know what to do! I'd trust him with my life. You got lucky this time Tony.

Badda bing badda boom!
Forgetta 'bout it!

I'm Very Proud Of My Brother For Launching His Tesla Into Orbit, But I'm Stuck In The Trunk And I'm Running Out Of Air

BY KIMBAL MUSK

You may know me as one of my brother Elon Musk's biggest friends, supporters, and partners. I am immensely proud of my brother for launching his Tesla in to orbit, but I have a problem. I'm stuck in the trunk and running out of air.

I hopped into his trunk as a joke. I was so proud of him for his hard work, and wanted to put a smile on his face by popping out of the trunk and yelling "surprise!" the next time he opened it. But, I had forgotten that this was the day he would be launching his Tesla into orbit.

And boy, has this decision kicked me in the butt.

Currently, I am locked in the trunk flying quickly away from earth in my own orbit around the sun. This poses a number of problems.

ily. Secondly, I am almost out of air and I don't know how long I can survive. I me, that would be fantastic. Either now or next time I come around close to Earth's orbit. Thanks, and go Elon!

own orbit around the sun. This poses a number of problems. Firstly, I need to be on earth in order to run my many boutique restaurants, my nonprofit, and be a part of my fam-want to ask him for help, but I know how important each of his launches are, and I don't want to make him use one up just to rescue his little brother.

If someone could get

Dear God, Please Make Me Smaller

BY SHAQ

Dear God,

First of all I want to thank you. My big, strong body is a wonderful gift. It's been fun being so big but I am getting tired of it. Please make me smaller.

When I was playing basketball, being big was good. I liked being big because it let me dunk on people without trying too hard. I have you to thank for that. But I don't have to dunk on people anymore so I would like to be smaller. Would you please make me smaller?

I have a great life. I am a millionaire. A television personality. A cultural icon. But I am also too big. It's hard to find shoes that fit, so I must be too big. Please make my body a little bit smaller so I can fit into they don't have enough leg room. I can afford first class because I was big for so long. But now, I get all squished. I see someone walk under a doorway without ducking and think, "Why can't that be me?" It's and being big was awesome. But now it's wearing thin. Our fingers don't fit together when we hold hands because my fingers are too big. God, you're the only one who can make me small enough to hold shoes. It would mean so much to me and make me so happy. Even if it's just a couple inches.

I have a great life. I am a millionaire. A television personality. A cultural icon. But I am also too big.

I don't fit right in chairs, God. I have chairs at my house that fit me. But chairs in other places don't. Even when I fly first class just not worth being this big anymore.

My girlfriend is regular sized. At first I thought our height difference was fun. I would have to bend down to kiss her, but I didn't think about it too much. I was still playing basketball, hands with my girlfriend. Please help me.

God, if you make me smaller I will pray for thirty minutes a day, donate one of my cars to charity, and will get baptized. I was never baptized because I was too big to fit in the tub. I'll talk about you all the time, God, which will be a big deal because I was such a famous NBA player. I will even mention you in my Hanes commercial. And if there's anything I did that made you angry and you don't want to make me smaller because of that, just let me know somehow and I will never do it again. I promise. I won't let you down.

Also, thank you for the championships with the Lakers. I had a lot of fun there.

Amen.

Senior Superlatives

We here at the Noser have this tradition called “Senior Superlatives.” We invented it and the basic idea is that we make categories that you can nominate your friends for. Fill it out!

Easiest to Lose Touch With

Conventionally Hot But Not Really My Type

Most Likely To Immediately Give Up On Dream of Being A Novelist

Wants To Win One of These So Bad

Least Salvageable

Most Likely To Sell Out, But Later In Life Realize That What They Truly Want, What They Truly Need, Can’t Be Bought, And One Day When They’ve Had Enough, Quit Their Job And Move To A Farm Where They Can Reconnect With Themselves

Wait, He’s A Senior?

THIS ONE’S FOR MAUD! WE LOVE YOU MAUD! GOOD LUCK AT WILLIAMS!

No One On Main Green That Good At The Sport They're Playing

BY WELL THAT'S IT

Watching someone kick a soccer ball way over the head of the person they were passing to, junior Shannon Richie reported that, even though there were tons of people playing sports on The Main Green, no one was that good.

"The people playing Frisbee in the middle look like they're having a blast but I haven't seen a single one catch it," continued Richie. "They're not even standing that far apart but the frisbee keeps flying toward the groups of people sitting on the ground nearby."

Richie went on to explain that it probably made sense no one on the Main Green was that good since everyone who was good would be playing at the OMac or one of those fields.

"And those guys playing Spikeball over there are trying so hard," reported Richie, "But they're not good. Like I see they changed into athletic clothes to play and are taking the game pretty seriously. But they keep batting the ball away."

"Those two playing catch with a baseball seem like they're doing fine but it's not like either of them are throwing very hard or fast," he said.

At press time, a boy needed two of his friends to help him get up on a slackline.

It's party time, Rocknell! It's my freshman year at State and I'm the coolest kid on campus. I'm gonna join every club, I'm gonna go to every party, and I'm gonna take every class. And here's the best part: I got into the school's secret society. I can't tell you the name or what we do but take my word that it's awesome. Here's a hint: remember Watergate? This is way bigger. I've already said too much. And, anyway, I have to get to the dining hall before it closes. Bye bye, Rocknell.

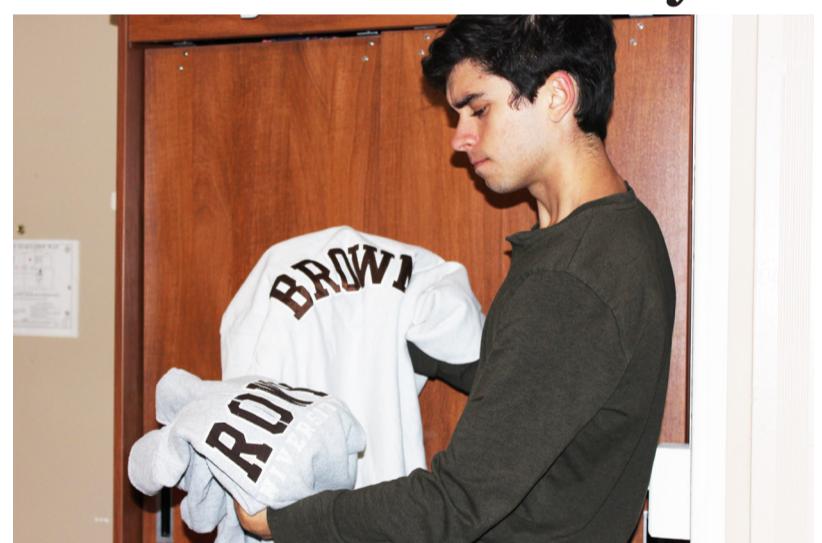

Brown Football Player Torn Between Which Brown Football Sweatshirt To Go With Today

BY BRENDAN PIERCE

Holding up two nearly identical options, sophomore football player Jimmy Giordano declared himself hopelessly unable to decide between his gray Brown University football hoodie and his black Brown University football hoodie.

"It's tough because they're both excellent options," stated Giordano, who plays left tackle for the Bears. "It's chilly out there today and each of them go really well with my football sweatpants."

It is reportedly the 52nd time this year that Giordano has spent more than ten minutes weighing what Brown football gear to go with. Giordano reports that in the past, he's struggled to choose between various Brown football-emblazoned long sleeve t-shirts, gym shorts, and tank tops.

Go Bears!

"I know that my buddy's wearing the gray one today, so maybe we shouldn't match," added Giordano. "But maybe it's better if we match because then everyone will know that we both play football on the same team."

In a last-minute decision, Giordano went with his grey one again.

Report: It So Hot That The Air Getting Wiggly

BY WE'LL MISS YOU!

As temperatures in the area rise, a report from the National Weather Service warned that it so hot that the air is getting wiggly.

"Temperatures are getting so high that we're beginning to see wiggles in the air just above the ground," said meteorologist Wendy Schein. "If you try to look down a street or sidewalk and notice that the air is doing a little dance, that means it is hot and you should be careful to stay cool and hydrated."

"We're going to see a lot of wiggles over the next few days," Schein added. "It's important to remember that temperatures can be excessively hot an hour or so before wiggles appear, and an hour or so after. So stay inside air conditioned buildings except when it's not necessary."

The report advised that in the middle of the day the temperature will reach into that zone where the air starts to do a shimmery little dance. It went on to say that the most prominent wiggles will be easily seen above grills being used for cookouts.